Royal (Dick) School of Veterinary Studies

Professional Doctorate in Veterinary Medicine (DVetMed) ("Residency") in Veterinary Anatomic Pathology

Applications are invited for a Professional Doctorate in Veterinary Medicine (DVetMed) ("Residency") based at Easter Bush Pathology at the Royal (Dick) School of Veterinary Studies, University of Edinburgh.

The position will comprise a four-year training in veterinary anatomic pathology and will provide broad exposure to small animals, farm, exotic and equine species, with some scope for specialisation. The resident will receive training in traditional necropsy work and histopathology, including surgical biopsy. They will be expected to fully participate in regular in-house training sessions and will be given the opportunity to gain some clinical pathology experience.

The scholarship is available from March 2019 and will run for a four-year fixed-term, renewable annually subject to completion of required DVetMed components.

By the end of the training period the resident will be expected to sit a globally recognised qualification in veterinary anatomic pathology, though training will be largely based on the requirements of the Diploma of the American College of Veterinary Pathologists (DipACVP). The scholarship also includes the requirement to undertake a pathology related research project, to be completed within the four-year training period.

The scholarship tax-free stipend is £19,664.08 per annum. Fees will be paid by the University of Edinburgh at UK/EU level. The successful applicant will join a team of four anatomic pathologists and three clinical pathologists. They will be a veterinary graduate, preferably with at least two years' experience in veterinary practice or referral service and hold a degree recognised by the RCVS.

For further information on an informal basis please contact Dr Jorge Del-Pozo (0131 650 8807, email Jorge.Del.Pozo@ed.ac.uk).
