

WORKSHOP ON DERMATOPATHOLOGY

The ESVD is pleased to announce the WORKSHOP ON DERMATOPATHOLOGY that will be held May 15th-18th, 2013 in Palazzo Trecchi - Cremona (Italy).

Speakers: Verena Affolter, Claudia von Tscharner, Julie Yager

Course presentation

The well known international speakers and the venue have provided in the previous years and will provide attendees with a very successful and useful workshop directed to all levels of preparation from the resident (ESVD, ASVP, ECVP, ACVP) to the specialized dermatopathologist. The workshop is structured in 4 intense days organized in morning lectures and evening microscope sessions embracing patterns of inflammation in skin biopsies to equine dermatopathology. Participants will have the opportunity to discuss cases with some of the world best known, communicative and experienced dermatopathologists. The workshop is enriched by a social programme and a wonderful venue in the city of Cremona. The quality of the international speakers, the location, the good ambiance and the good pathology and science will make this workshop a significant and unforgettable experience.

See attached brochure for the specific information.

CREMONA

With its numberless artistic beauties and wonderful itineraries, Cremona is an interesting tourist attraction. The town square, in particular, is considered one of the most beautiful medieval squares in Italy. It is surrounded by many monuments, among which stands the Torrazzo, the town bell tower and symbol of Cremona. Cremona is the home of the best known violin makers including the greatest luttist A. Stradivari. Cremona has a wide range of museums that offer diverse collections, including the largest collection of Stradivari violins in the world, and activities that provide the visitor with the opportunity to discover the historical and cultural background of the town.

VENUE

Our courses are organized in Palazzo Trecchi a wonderful and historical building located in the centre of Cremona within walking distance from all suggested hotels and city town square. Palazzo Trecchi was one of the most important and magnificent buildings of the Renaissance period in Cremona and hosted therefore kings, emperors, bishops, distinguished men and leaders, among whom: Louis XII of France, Charles V of Spain and Giuseppe Garibaldi. Around 1840, architect Brilli was commissioned by Marquis Manfredo Alessandro Trecchi to renovate the palace in the Neo-Gothic style. The facade is now decorated with Gothic and Moresque elements, such as the big horizontal frieze and the crowning battlements. In the courtyard the arcades are supported by eighteen red Verona marble columns. Today the palace hosts meetings, together with public and private events. It is the headquarter of the SCIVAC Association.
