Vacancy Ref: 034760
Salary: Grade, level 8/9, £44,045 - £51,034/£52,560 - £59,135 per annum

The University of Glasgow, School of Veterinary Medicine is seeking a highly motivated and experienced Senior Veterinary Clinician/Veterinary Clinician in Anatomic Pathology. The successful candidate will join our enthusiastic group of clinicians and lecturers in the division of Pathology, Public Health and Disease Investigation. The expertise within the division include clinical pathology, infectious diseases, veterinary public health and disease investigation and surveillance. You will deliver diagnostic pathology services (necropsy and biopsy) to internal hospitals and external referring veterinary practices, as well as delivery of undergraduate teaching and training of postgraduate students are all key components of this role. In addition, engagement with collaborative research opportunities is also an important feature of the role.

The successful candidate will enjoy working as part of a team. You will contribute to an excellent student experience by developing, delivering, and reviewing teaching, assessment and administration processes associated with our innovative undergraduate and postgraduate programmes as well as undertaking scholarship to enhance learning and teaching in the School.

The School has an international reputation in teaching, clinical services and research and is accredited by the Royal College of Veterinary Surgeons (RCVS), the European Association of Establishments of Veterinary Education (EAEVE) and the American Veterinary Medical Association (AVMA).

The successful candidate will hold a veterinary degree registrable with the RCVS and be nationally and internationally recognised as an expert in anatomic pathology ideally with certification by the European College of Pathologists or the American College of Pathologists. A PhD or equivalent would be desirable.

This position is full time and is open ended.
