The University of Edinburgh is an exciting, vibrant, research led academic community offering opportunities to work with leading international academics whose visions are shaping tomorrow's world.

Royal (Dick) School of Veterinary Studies Resident (Senior Clinical Training Scholar) in Veterinary Anatomic Pathology

Applications are invited for a Clinical Scholarship (Residency) based in Easter Bush Pathology at the Royal (Dick) School of Veterinary Studies, University of Edinburgh.

The position will comprise a three-year training in veterinary anatomic pathology and will provide broad exposure to small animals, farm, exotic and equine species, with some scope for specialisation. The Scholar will receive training in traditional necropsy work and histopathology, including surgical biopsy. They will be expected to fully participate in regular in-house training sessions and will be given the opportunity to gain some clinical pathology experience.

By the end of the training period the Scholar will be expected to sit a globally recognised qualification in veterinary anatomic pathology, though training will be largely based on the requirements of the Diploma of the American College of Veterinary Pathologists (DipACVP). The Scholarship also includes the requirement to undertake a pathology related research project, to be completed within the three-year training period.

The Scholarship tax-free stipend is £18,956.25 per annum. Fees will be paid by the University of Edinburgh at UK/EU level. The successful applicant will join a team of four anatomic pathologists and three clinical pathologists. They will be a veterinary graduate, preferably with at least two years' experience in veterinary practice or referral service and hold a degree recognised by the RCVS.

For further information on an informal basis please contact Dr Sionagh Smith (0131 650 8787 or email sionagh.smith@ed.ac.uk).
